WELCOME TO THE PEACE, Where opportunity lives.

If you have ever driven north on Highway 97 and watched the landscape open into wide skies, working farms, wind turbines, and rivers that look like they were designed for postcards, you already know the Peace River Region is not just a place on a map.

It is a place where things get built, careers get launched, businesses get started, and families put down roots.

Yes, we have trucks. Yes, we have steel-toed boots. We also have live music, outdoor concerts, galleries, youth sports leagues, and some of the best fishing you will ever pretend you are good at.

A common statement in our region is, "Well, we came here 27 years ago on a one-year plan to earn some money... we just can't beat the life here."

SMALL POPULATION, BIG OUTPUT

The Peace River Region plays a central role in the provincial economy, generating most of B.C.'s natural gas, a significant portion of its electricity, and the majority of its agricultural grain output.

This concentration of production makes the region one of the most economically productive areas per capita in the province.

Fort St. John is one of the sunniest places in British Columbia, with about 2,095 hours of sunshine a year and roughly 304 days with some sun.

For comparison, Vancouver averages about 1,938 hours of sunshine annually.

“ Translation: fewer grey days and a lot more blue sky than most people expect. Also, no one here owns an umbrella. **”

PEACE RIVER REGIONAL DISTRICT

THE PEACE REGION...

ECONOMIC ENGINE OF THE PROVINCE

Northeast BC (NEBC) spans approximately 200,000km², making up about 22% of the province's total land area. For context, NEBC is big enough to fit Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island combined, with room to spare. The region lies east of the Rocky Mountains and is characterized by boreal forests, grasslands, foothills, and river valleys. The Peace River, which flows eastward into Alberta, is the defining waterway of the region.

The Peace River Region is an economic engine for the province, contributing substantially to British Columbia's prosperity while representing just over 1% of it's population.

Dominated by resource industries (natural gas, hydroelectric power, forestry, mining, and agriculture), the region generates significant GDP, exports, and employment.

Supplying nearly all of British Columbia's natural gas (about one third of Canada's total) and more than 30 percent of its hydroelectric power, Northeast BC is the foundation of the province's energy security.

While small in population (~70,000 residents), Northeast BC punches far above its weight by powering homes, fuelling industries, and anchoring the provincial economy in ways that ripple far beyond its borders. The region's continued prosperity is essential to the well-being of communities across all of British Columbia.

Jeannotte Notaries - Serving British
Columbians with integrity and peace of mind.

Opportunity you can actually afford.

Let's start with the headline: this is one of the few places in British Columbia where opportunity still comes with a driveway, a backyard (probably with an ice rink in it), and a reasonable commute.

The regional economy is powered by a mix of energy, agriculture, forestry, construction, transportation, environmental services, and a growing list of emerging sectors including wind, hydrogen, and other innovation-driven projects. That diversity means jobs at every stage of a career, from trades and technical work to professional services, public administration, education, health care, and entrepreneurship.

It is also a place where starting a business is not just a dream you talk about over coffee. Through local support organizations and regional partnerships, entrepreneurs can access financing, mentorship, training, and practical tools to turn an idea into a paycheck. The region has built a reputation for being practical, collaborative, and willing to try something new, which is exactly what small businesses need.

And yes, people still move here for work and end up staying for everything else.

The Peace has a young, working-age population and a high labour force participation rate compared to many parts of B.C.

About 68 per cent of residents in the Northeast region are of working age.

In Fort St. John alone, more than 16,500 people are in the labour force, with more than 15,000 employed.

Most people commute less than 15 minutes to work, and the vast majority drive, reflecting local job locations and short travel times.

Regionally, unemployment in Northeast B.C. has typically remained at or below the provincial average, sitting around 6 per cent in recent data.

In plain terms: this is a place where people work, where jobs span multiple sectors, and where getting to work does not take half your day.

Key employment sectors include:

- ▶ Construction
- ▶ Oil, Gas & Energy
- ▶ Natural Resources
- ▶ Agriculture
- ▶ Retail & Service
- ▶ Transportation & Logistics

A place to build a life, not just make a living

In the Peace, quality of life is not a slogan. It is a daily reality.

Short commutes mean more time at the arena, the dance studio, the trailhead, or the dinner table. Home ownership is still attainable. Kids grow up playing outside, joining teams, volunteering at community events, and actually knowing their neighbours.

It is the kind of place where someone will coach soccer, serve on a board, help organize a festival, and still make it to work at 8 a.m. the next day. Community spirit is not something that gets written into a strategic plan. It just happens.

Families choose to stay here, and just as often, they come back after trying life elsewhere, because the balance between work, affordability, and community is hard to match.

A Warm Welcome to the North Peace from

Partnerships that are shaping the future

The Peace River Region is located in Treaty 8 territory and is home to strong and growing First Nations communities whose leadership, businesses, and partnerships are helping shape the economic and cultural future of the region.

Collaboration between municipalities, First Nations, industry, and community organizations is creating new opportunities in education, employment, infrastructure, environmental stewardship, and cultural programming. These partnerships are practical, measurable, and focused on long-term outcomes.

From training and scholarship programs to joint economic initiatives and community infrastructure, these relationships are building capacity and opening doors for the next generation.

AS LONG AS THE
SUN SHINES,
GRASS GROWS
AND THE RIVERS FLOW.

The Peace Region is located on the traditional territory of the Dane-zaa First Nation peoples.

According to Dane-zaa oral history, the Peace River is named for the settling of a conflict between the Dane-zaa and the Cree. The Cree traditionally lived south and east of the Upper Peace River region. Due to their trade with settlers, they had guns and they pushed the Dane-zaa northwest in the late 18th century. A peace treaty, negotiated in the late 1700s or early 1800s, stated that the Cree would live south of the Peace River, and the Dane-zaa north. The Peace River, before and after its new name, marked a boundary zone, where groups met for trade, celebration, and settling of disputes.

Archaeological evidence at Charlie Lake Cave establishes that the area of Charlie Lake north of Fort St. John has been continuously occupied for 12,500 years by varying cultures of indigenous peoples.

The Dane-zaa of Fort St. John took an adhesion to Treaty 8 in 1900. Today they continue to have a strong cultural and economic presence in the North Peace area.

The Peace Region is home to several First Nation communities, including:

- Blueberry River First Nation
- Prophet River First Nation
- Doig River First Nation
- Halfway River First Nation
- Fort Nelson First Nation
- Saulteau First Nation
- West Moberly First Nations
- Tsay Keh Dene Band

The ethno-linguistic grouping within these First Nations communities includes Sicannie (Sikanni), Slavey, Beaver (Dane-Zaa), Cree, Saulteau and Dene.

On June 21, 1899, the eighth treaty between the Indigenous people of North America and the Queen of England was signed and would become known as the most comprehensive treaty in Canada.

The signatories of Treaty No. 8 agreed to the oral promises made during these negotiations and understood them as a partnership based on peace and friendship, a partnership that would create certainty for both parties, "For as long as the sun shines, the grass grows and the rivers flow".

The Treaty 8 Tribal Association was incorporated in 1982 under the BC Societies Act and currently represents six of the First Nations in Northeastern BC. The Treaty 8 Tribal Association acts as a coordinator, facilitator, and technical support on various issues as mandated from time to time by the Council of Treaty 8 Chiefs.

A region that builds what others rely on

There is a quiet pride in the Peace about the role the region plays in powering homes, feeding communities, and supporting industries across the province and beyond.

Energy, agriculture, and resource development are not abstract concepts here. They are jobs, businesses, and community investments that fund arenas, schools, recreation facilities, and local programs.

At the same time, the region is evolving. Environmental stewardship, reclamation work, and new technologies are creating additional career paths and strengthening the long-term sustainability of local industries.

This is not a region that stands still. It adapts, innovates, and keeps moving forward.

An Investment Magnet

Resource development, agriculture, and major infrastructure projects in the Peace represent tens of billions of dollars in capital investment, supporting supply chains, construction, transportation, environmental services, and local businesses across northern B.C.

Economic ripple effect is not a theory here. It is Tuesday.

Arts, culture, and a healthy disregard for stereotypes

Let's deal with the myth right now. No, the Peace is not just hard hats and pickup trucks. Sometimes, sadly, it is also a suit and tie. But we don't discriminate.

It is also live music in local venues, outdoor concerts in the summer, community festivals, public art, theatre productions, libraries, museums, and a creative scene that reflects the people who live here. Local performers, cultural groups, and volunteers keep the calendar full year-round.

You can attend a community concert one night and a Pride event the next. You can find photography exhibits, craft markets, heritage programming, and youth arts initiatives that are building the next generation of creators.

The cultural life of the region is better than many big cities. Diverse, practical, welcoming, and not particularly interested in being told what they are supposed to be.

Cold hands, warm hearts is not just a catchy phrase. It is a pretty accurate description.

THE CITY OF FORT ST. JOHN

THE ENERGETIC CITY

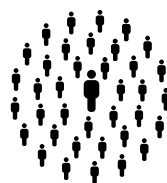

The City of Fort St. John has become the economic and employment hub of Northeast British Columbia, emerging over the past 15 years as the primary service centre for the broader Peace Region. As the largest city in the region, Fort St. John functions as the commercial, administrative, and industrial base that supports surrounding communities, rural areas, and resource developments.

The city's economy is strongly tied to energy production, particularly oil and natural gas development throughout the Montney formation and surrounding basins. Many major energy companies maintain regional offices in Fort St. John, alongside engineering firms, service contractors, and supply companies that support exploration, drilling, and production across Northern British Columbia and neighbouring Alberta. This concentration of industry has helped drive employment growth, population stability, and continued investment in commercial and residential development.

Transportation infrastructure also reinforces Fort St. John's role as a regional hub. The nearby North Peace Regional Airport provides regular commercial flights that connect the city to major centres across Western Canada, enabling efficient travel for industry professionals and supporting regional business activity.

Together with its growing retail sector, professional services, and expanding residential neighbourhoods, Fort St. John continues to serve as the central economic engine for the North Peace region and a key gateway to resource development in northern British Columbia.

MEET A FORT ST. JOHN ENTREPRENEUR BUSINESS PROFILE

The Crooked Spoon Meal Co. was built on a simple belief — that food should fuel your body, support your health, and still taste incredible.

Owner Bonnie Gouldie created The Crooked Spoon from a deeply personal journey with nutrition and healing. Growing up connected to the land — hunting, fishing, and gardening — she learned early on the value of real, whole foods. Later in life, that understanding became even more important as she began to explore how nutrition could truly impact overall health, energy, and well-being.

Bonnie also understands firsthand the reality of busy, overwhelming seasons of life.

"I know what it's like to work long hours, feel isolated, and not always have access to healthy meals — or any meals at all. I was a single mom working multiple jobs, and getting home to cook something healthy wasn't always easy. I made it work, but there were definitely days I wished there was a fast, healthy option I could rely on."

That experience became part of the foundation for The Crooked Spoon.

What started as meal prep has grown into a space where the community can walk in and find food that is not only convenient, but intentional.

At The Crooked Spoon Meal Co., the focus goes beyond just macros. It's about gut health, quality ingredients, and transparency. Meals are made without shortcuts — no unnecessary additives, no heavy sodium, and no hidden ingredients. Proteins are not brined or soaked, and everything is prepared with a focus on how it will make you feel, not just how it looks on paper.

The menu is designed to support real life:
- High-protein meals for strength and energy
- Gut-friendly options to support digestion and overall health
- Fresh grab-and-go meals, breakfast options, and protein treats
- Coffee and quick options for busy mornings
- Catered lunches for local businesses and teams.

Bonnie's vision is to make healthy food more accessible — without sacrificing flavor or enjoyment. More than anything, The Crooked Spoon is about community.

It's a place built to support people in their day-to-day lives — whether that's helping someone stay on track with their goals, offering better options for busy families, or simply providing a welcoming space to grab something nourishing.

"My goal isn't perfection — it's to help people feel better, one meal at a time."

As The Crooked Spoon continues to grow, Bonnie remains focused on creating a space that brings people together, supports local partnerships, and encourages a stronger connection between food, health, and lifestyle.

Message from your Mayor

Greetings to residents, visitors, and members of our business community. I am pleased to welcome you to Fort St. John and to begin by acknowledging that we are on the traditional territory of the Dane-zaa, signatories of Treaty 8, and the Métis Nation BC Region 7. We honour the enduring relationship Indigenous Peoples have with this land and remain committed to respectful partnerships and meaningful reconciliation.

Fort St. John continues to grow and evolve while holding on to the strong sense of community that defines who we are. Known as a place where people come to build, contribute, and put down roots, our city is shaped by opportunity, resilience, and a shared sense of purpose.

Located at the heart of a resource-rich region, Fort St. John has long supported livelihoods, innovation, and responsible development. Agriculture, forestry, and energy continue to play an important role in the regional economy, providing employment, investment, and long-term stability. From fertile farmland and working forests to oil, gas, and emerging renewable energy opportunities, these sectors have helped shape our community. Guided by stewardship and collaboration, we remain focused on balancing economic prosperity with environmental responsibility for the benefit of current and future generations.

Our downtown and commercial areas offer a balance of locally owned businesses and national retailers, creating a strong local economy and opportunities for entrepreneurs, workers, and families. Whether you are starting something new or growing an established business, Fort St. John is a place where effort is valued, and ambition is supported.

As a true winter city, we embrace every season and make the most of what each has to offer. Community events like the month-long Fort St. John Winter Festival bring people together and reflect the creativity, energy, and welcoming nature of our community. From skating and cross-country skiing to year-round trails and recreation programs, Fort St. John offers accessible ways to stay active and connected in every season.

Our region is surrounded by remarkable landscapes and cultural destinations that speak to both discovery and belonging. Residents and visitors enjoy access to hiking, paddling, and outdoor exploration, as well as nearby attractions such as the Tumbler Ridge UNESCO Global Geopark and the Tse'k'wa National Historic Site. These places allow many people who come north to find meaning, connection, and a sense of home.

Fort St. John is also a regional leader in sport and recreation. Facilities such as the Pomeroy Sport Centre support athletes, families, and community groups, while continued investment in parks, public spaces, and amenities ensures opportunities for all ages and abilities. One of the most significant initiatives now before the community is the proposed new aquatics facility. Designed to meet long-term needs, the project reflects feedback from residents and user groups and aims to provide a modern, accessible space for recreation, sport, therapy, and community connection.

The City continues to focus on strengthening infrastructure, enhancing public spaces, and supporting a vibrant local economy. Downtown improvements and gathering places like Festival Plaza have become hubs for events, markets, and celebrations, reinforcing Fort St. John as a place where people come together and feel they belong.

Whether you are discovering Fort St. John for the first time or have long called it home, we invite you to experience what makes our city unique. From opportunity and connection to community spirit and shared pride, Fort St. John is a place where people arrive with intention and often find much more than they expected.

Warm regards,
Mayor Lilia Hansen

The state of the market Real Estate in Fort St. John

When you live in Fort St. John, you'll hear the story a hundred times. People come here with a five-year plan...

First, they rent.

Then maybe they meet someone special – then, as smart, forward-thinking folks, they decide to buy and put down some roots. You know... stop paying someone else's mortgage.

Maybe 'littles' follow and suddenly it's time for a bit more room... and another five years quietly gets added to the plan.

Before you know it, the 'littles' are bigger. They have friends, sports teams, and favourite teachers. You know every one of your neighbours.

Now it's been ten years – and no one is leaving.

That pattern isn't accidental. It's supported by something Fort St. John still has, that much of the province does not: housing affordability.

Fort St. John's Housing Affordability Indicator sits at 24.4%, meaning the major costs of home-ownership represent roughly a quarter of the median household income.

Put another way, in many parts of the province housing costs stretch households to their limit. In Fort St. John, home-ownership does not have to mean major sacrifices.

Combine that with comparatively attainable housing prices and the result is something increasingly rare in Canada today: a place where career growth and home-ownership can happen at the same time.

Affordability makes home-ownership possible – but home-ownership builds something harder to measure: community.

That distinction has been consistent. Independent rankings have repeatedly placed Fort St. John among the most affordable cities in British Columbia, often landing near the top of the list.

As of February 2026, the average sale price of homes is up 8% year-over-year and roughly 6% over the past three years. The trend is expected to continue through 2026 – and likely at a steeper pace.

Why? What's the catalyst?

More people are arriving to work in the region's industries, public services, and supporting businesses – and they all need somewhere to live.

Active listings are down 18% year-over-year, and 30% lower than they were three years ago, and continuing to trend down.

Simply put: there aren't enough homes. In 2025, there were only 10 building permits issued for residential construction in Fort St. John.

Across the province, builders are facing ever-increasing construction costs. But the challenge in Fort St. John is slightly different: housing prices are still low enough that there is often a razor-thin line between making a modest profit and taking a loss.

Historically, a building project in Fort St. John might have started when market conditions looked promising, but by the time finishing touches are being completed, material costs may have risen and the market softened slightly – that's not what we're seeing today. New builds are being sold at top dollar (for Fort St. John) and often sell right as soon as they're put on the market.

It has become enough of an issue that the City of Fort St. John is actively exploring ways to attract builders from the Lower Mainland, where new construction has slowed in recent years.

“ In a province where housing headlines often tell a difficult story, Fort St. John offers a different one. ”

MEET A FORT ST. JOHN INDUSTRY LEADER BUSINESS PROFILE

We are Kona Real Estate Group — a Fort St. John-based homebuilding and real estate company founded in 2010 by Josh Wiggers. What started with a strong work ethic and a hands-on approach to construction has grown into a full team of builders, project managers, and support staff working toward a shared standard: do the work properly and stand behind it.

Amongst a mix of personalities, backgrounds, and skill sets —stands a group of dedicated and skilled trades people that operate with a high level of respect, accountability, and care for one another. We push each other, support each other but most importantly we accept one another. We each carry our own vision of success, but we understand it's not fully realized alone — it's built through shared effort, within our team and alongside our clients.

At our core, we are builders that take a disciplined approach to every project, making sure our homes are practical, well-designed, and aligned with what the market can realistically support. In a world where new construction is constantly compared to existing homes, we focus on delivering a product that holds value and makes sense long term, as both a practical and comfortable place to live, but also as an investment.

Here at Kona, we have learned to recognize that building homes is only part of the responsibility and that the experience around it matters just as much. As we've grown, we've become increasingly focused on improving our processes, communication, customer service, and aftercare. We don't claim to be perfect — but we do take accountability. When mistakes happen, we address them, learn from them, and work to be better on the next project.

Fort St. John is home for us, and everything we build reflects that. We're here for the long run — committed to improving, delivering, and earning trust through our actions over time.

DISTRICT OF TAYLOR

WHERE PEACE & PROSPERITY MEET

With a population of just over 1,300 residents and growing, the District of Taylor provides a small community lifestyle while allowing residents easy access to the services, shopping, and employment opportunities of the larger city nearby. This proximity allows many people to enjoy the benefits of city life without living directly within a larger urban centre.

Taylor's economy is closely linked to the broader resource sector of the Peace Region. Many residents work in oil and gas, construction, transportation, and supporting industries throughout the region, commuting daily to nearby job sites or to centres like Fort St. John & Dawson Creek. The community's location along major transportation routes also supports industrial services and businesses that serve the region's energy sector.

The community's location along the Peace River also contributes to its appeal. Peace Island Park serves as a major local attraction, offering camping, trails, and riverside recreation that draw visitors throughout the year. The park's natural setting provides opportunities for fishing, hiking, and community events, helping support tourism and local activity.

Taylor also draws visitors through its unique events and attractions. The Taylor Speedway hosts motorsport events that bring racers and spectators from across the region, supporting local tourism and businesses. In addition, Taylor is home to the World Invitational Gold Panning Championships, an international event held at Peace Island Park that celebrates the region's gold-rush heritage and attracts competitors and visitors from around the world.

Taylor's strategic location, strong regional connections, and recreational amenities create a community that blends economic opportunity with a relaxed northern lifestyle.

We are Latitude 56! An outdoorsy themed apparel and headwear brand, based in Taylor, BC at Mile 36 of the Alaska Highway. All our northern critter designs are originals, each one is its own series: Hibernation Series features a bear, Muskeg Series a moose, Distracted Series a squirrel and so on.

In the spring of 2024, we thought our critters would like to explore the Alaska Highway, meet new people and go on adventures with them! We started traveling up the Alaska Highway on a regular basis showing off our brand and looking for retail partners. They loved our product like we knew they would but we were consistently being asked for place name drops. We had to think how to accommodate this.

Mike's creative mind took over and he came up with the Travelers Series, as a specific niche product, Latitude branded but templated to allow us to accommodate individual name drops and the Alaska Highway mileage as well.

Now, it's a good thing I have graphic design capabilities, because nobody would have paid for that drawing...LOL! But the concept was good and here we are with 20 designs at the moment and more being added. The buy-in has been incredible. We've created a trail of collectible Latitude 56 Travelers Series hoodies all up the highway.

Maybe you're at Shepherd's Inn and get our Mile 72 hoody with a moose, a bear at Triple G, Mile 300, or a buffalo Mile 497 Liard Hot Springs Lodge. All made in our Latitude shop in little ol' Taylor town. On your adventure, also watch for our core lines of hats and apparel wherever you stop, but especially watch out for our co-branded Travelers Series to find the perfect location specific hoody for yourself and everyone on your list.

Happy traveling with our critters and your memories ♥

Tse'k'wa National Historic Site

Charlie Lake, BC

Tse'k'wa ("rock house" in Dane-zaa/Beaver language) is an important cultural site for the Dane-zaa people, dating back more than 12,500 years. Formerly known as the Charlie Lake Cave, it is now recognized as a National Historic Site for its cultural and archaeological significance. The site is owned and managed by the Tse'k'wa Heritage Society, a non-profit organization that is a collaboration of three First Nations: Doig River, Prophet River and West Moberly First Nations. Their shared vision is to share Dane-zaa culture, language, and heritage.

The Society continues to transform the site to welcome the public. Improvements include an interpretive trail to the cave, open air amphitheater, accessible picnic tables and outhouses, and an archaeology dome. Indoor interpretive experiences are planned for the future. The Society's goal is to create a world-class museum and interpretive centre connecting the past, present, and future.

Tse'k'wa Heritage Society invites you to enter a gathering space used by the Dane-zaa since the time of the wq̓lii nachíí (giant animals). Our cultural programming and public events will bring you on an exciting journey of shared history that builds respect for our land's First Peoples. Local Giving. Lasting Impact. Stronger Communities.

The Northeast BC Community Foundation is built on a simple idea: when people care about a place, they invest in its future.

For more than a decade, the Foundation has connected the generosity of local residents, organizations, and businesses with projects that strengthen communities across Northeast British Columbia.

Whether you're new to the Peace Country, visiting the region, or building a business here, you'll quickly notice something special about this part of BC — people show up for their communities. The Northeast BC Community Foundation helps turn that spirit into lasting impact by supporting local charities, community groups, and initiatives that improve quality of life throughout the region.

Each year, the Foundation provides grants to projects that enhance community life — from youth programs, recreation, and arts and culture to environmental initiatives, community wellness, and local events. By investing in organizations that know their communities best, the Foundation helps bring good ideas to life and supports the people doing important work on the ground.

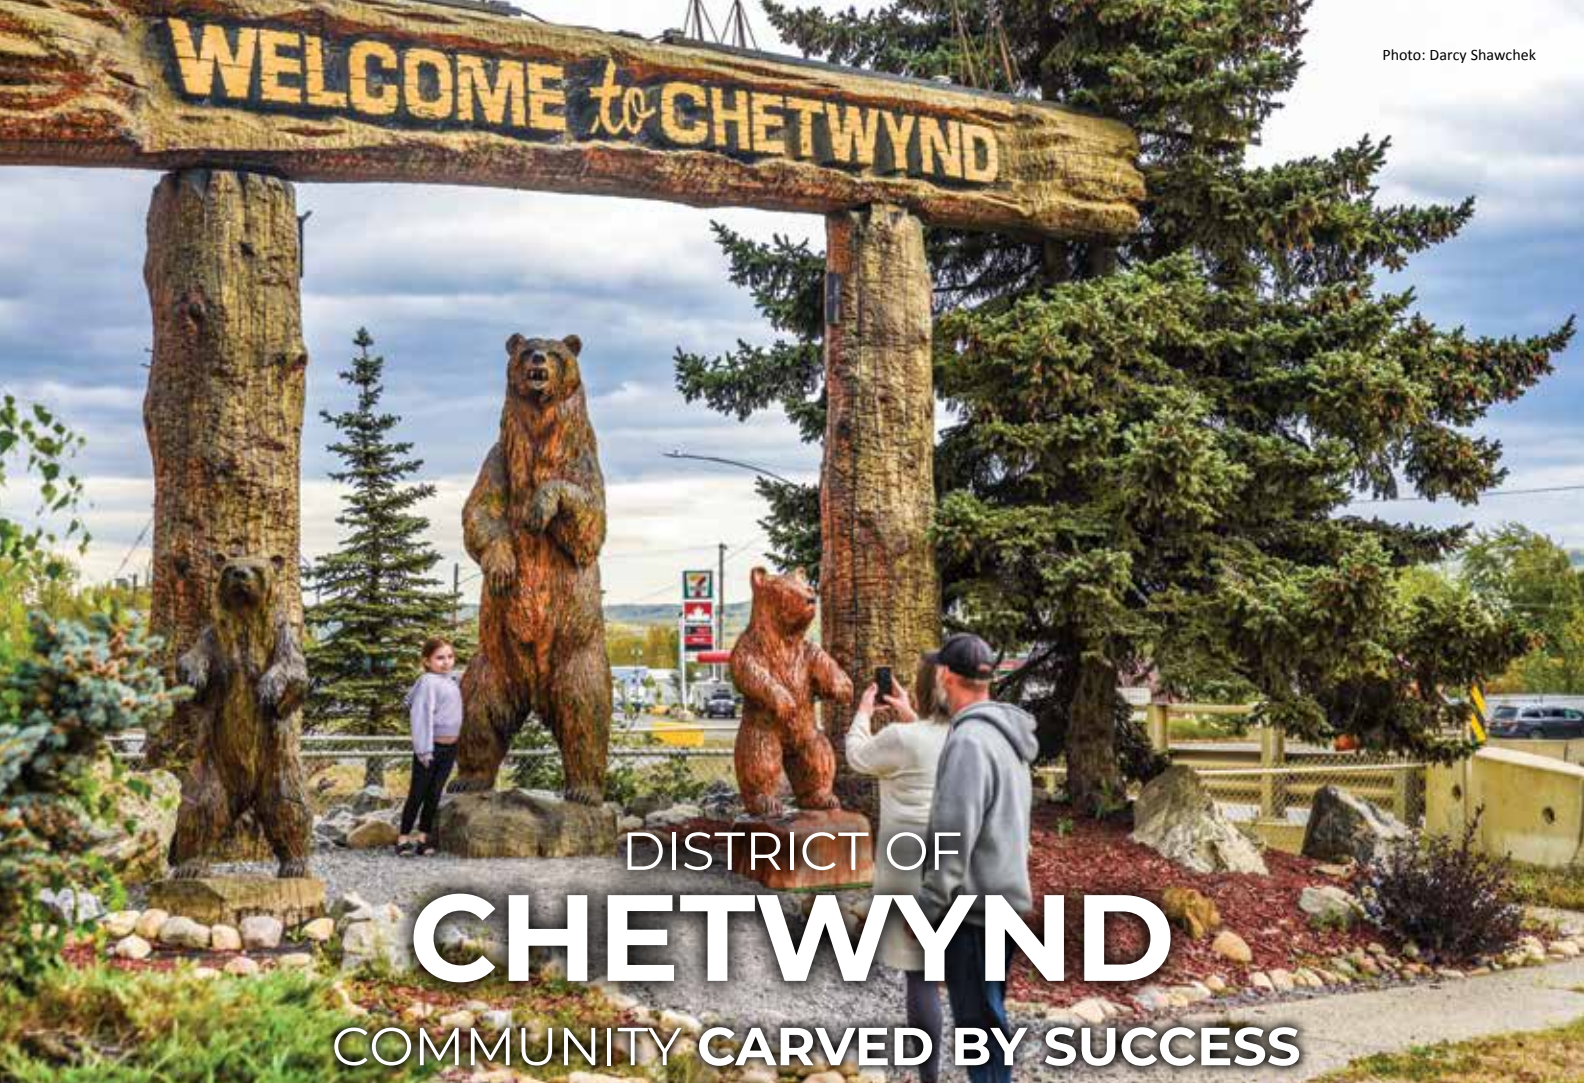

Over the past decade, the Foundation has distributed more than $500,000 in grants, supporting over 60 community projects with more than 40 local organizations across Northeast BC. These investments strengthen local services, create opportunities for youth and families, and help communities thrive.

What makes a community foundation unique is its long-term vision. Donations are invested to create permanent funds that support communities year after year — meaning a gift made today can help fund local programs, scholarships, and community projects for generations to come.

Local businesses, organizations, and individuals partner with the Foundation to create named funds, support community initiatives, and leave a lasting legacy. Because the Foundation is rooted in the region, funding decisions are guided by local knowledge and a deep understanding of community priorities.

At its heart, the Northeast BC Community Foundation is about people helping people — building strong, welcoming, and resilient communities across the region.

Families and professionals are drawn to the community's small-town atmosphere, strong sense of community, low municipal tax rates, and accessible housing market. The town's safe neighbourhoods, local schools, and close proximity to nature create an ideal environment for raising families and enjoying a balanced lifestyle.

Economically, Tumbler Ridge is closely connected to the broader industrial economy of the Peace Region. Many residents work throughout the region in sectors such as energy, construction, and resource development. At the same time, a significant portion of the local workforce is employed by Conuma Coal Resources, which operates coal mines in the surrounding area and plays a major role in the local economy. These employment opportunities help support a stable population and contribute to the town's strong working-class foundation.

The District of Tumbler Ridge continues to present a wide range of business development opportunities. Its growing reputation as a tourism destination, combined with a supportive municipal government and available commercial space, creates potential for new ventures in hospitality, recreation services, retail, and professional services.

Entrepreneurs and investors will find a community eager to support growth while maintaining the unique character that makes Tumbler Ridge such a special place to live, work, play, and explore.

CITY OF DAWSON CREEK

START YOUR SOMETHING IN DAWSON CREEK

Located at Mile 0 of the world-famous Alaska Highway, Dawson Creek serves as a major transportation and service hub for the South Peace region. Its strategic position as a key transport artery into neighboring Alberta has helped shape a diverse and resilient economy built on agriculture, energy, and regional commerce.

Surrounded by some of the most productive agricultural land in the region, Dawson Creek functions as a central service hub for farmers and agri-businesses throughout the area. Local businesses support crop production, livestock operations, and agricultural technology, while transportation links allow products to move efficiently across provincial borders and into broader markets.

Energy development also plays an important role in the city's economic landscape. The nearby Bear Mountain Wind Farm - the first commercial wind farm in British Columbia - highlights the region's growing role in renewable power generation. Alongside traditional resource industries operating throughout the Peace Region, this project reflects the area's diversified energy sector.

Within the community, Dawson Creek continues to invest in quality of life and long-term infrastructure. The Oviniv Events Centre acts as a major gathering place for sports, concerts, and regional events, drawing visitors from across the region and Northern Alberta. At the same time, ongoing revitalization efforts in the downtown core are helping strengthen the local business environment by encouraging new investment, improving public spaces, and supporting small businesses.

Municipal leadership has also prioritized long-term infrastructure development, including significant investments in water system upgrades that support future residential, commercial, and industrial growth. Combined with relatively affordable housing compared to many other Canadian communities, Dawson Creek continues to attract families, professionals, and entrepreneurs looking for opportunity in a vibrant northern economy.

Together, strong transportation connections, a thriving agricultural base, expanding energy development, and strategic community investment position Dawson Creek as a key economic centre in the South Peace region.

OIL & GAS

The Peace Region is home to the Montney Formation - one of the largest known oil and gas resources in the world.

Kevin MacLellan
LIGHT THUNDER FILMS AND MOVING PICTURES
PRODUCTION

The Peace Region has long been recognized as one of Canada's most productive energy hubs. Oil and gas development serves as a cornerstone of our region's economy, supporting thousands of jobs, generating significant investment, and fueling economic activity throughout our area.

Over the past two decades, our region has evolved into a globally significant centre for natural gas production, driven largely by the development of the Montney Formation.

The Montney Formation, which stretches across Northeastern British Columbia and into Alberta, is widely regarded as one of the most important unconventional natural gas and liquids plays in the world. Its vast reserves and consistent productivity have attracted major energy companies and billions of dollars in investment. Producers operating in the Peace Region supply both domestic markets and an expanding network of international export infrastructure, positioning the Montney as a key component of Canada's role in the global energy landscape.

Technological innovation has played a critical role in unlocking the Montney's potential. Advances in horizontal drilling, multi-stage hydraulic fracturing, and real-time data monitoring have dramatically improved efficiency and recovery rates. Modern drilling techniques allow companies to extract more energy from each well while reducing the number of surface sites required. These efficiencies have helped maintain the region's competitiveness even as global energy markets fluctuate.

Several major energy companies maintain a strong presence in the Peace Region, including industry leaders such as ARC Resources, Tourmaline Oil, Ovintiv, Shell Canada, and ConocoPhillips. These companies operate extensive drilling programs and maintain offices, field facilities, and supply chains throughout the region. Their operations support a broad network of service companies, contractors, and local businesses that together form the backbone of the region's industrial economy.

The Montney Basin produced
93% of BC's Oil & Gas in 2024
a total production of 73,520 e⁶m³

That's more than 73

Natural gas produced in the Peace Region feeds into a growing network of pipelines that connect Northeastern BC to both domestic and international markets. One of the most significant pieces of infrastructure is the Coastal GasLink pipeline, a 670 km project that transports natural gas from the Montney region to the LNG Canada export facility in Kitimat. Once fully operational, the pipeline will have the capacity to transport approximately 2.1 billion cubic feet of natural gas per day, supplying liquefied natural gas to global markets.

Other export infrastructure is also strengthening the Peace Region's role in international energy trade. The AltaGas Ridley Island Propane Export Terminal near Prince Rupert receives propane produced in the Montney and ships it to overseas markets, particularly in Asia. This facility provides another outlet for natural gas liquids produced in Northeastern BC, adding value to the region's resource development.

Looking to the future, the proposed Prince Rupert Gas Transmission pipeline represents another potential milestone for our region. Designed to move natural gas from the Peace Region to the West Coast for LNG export, the project could further expand our connection to global energy markets. Once complete, it will build upon the momentum created by Coastal GasLink and reinforce our position as one of North America's most important natural gas producers.

Together, these developments illustrate the continuing importance of oil and gas in the Peace Region. With world-class resources, cutting-edge technology, and expanding export infrastructure, Northeastern British Columbia remains a vital contributor to Canada's energy economy and a key supplier to the growing global demand for natural gas.

LNG Canada shipped its first international cargo on June 30th, 2025

LNG Canada has successfully loaded a first cargo of liquefied natural gas that is now destined for global markets, marking the start of operations at Canada's first large-scale LNG export facility. This historic achievement is made possible in part due to the oil & gas produced in the Peace Region, and delivered to the west coast via the Coastal GasLink pipeline.

Established in October 1998, the BC Energy Regulator (BCER) is the provincial single-window regulatory agency responsible for regulating energy activities in B.C.

The BCER protects public safety and safeguards the environment through the sound regulation of energy activities in BC, while balancing a broad range of environmental, economic and social considerations.

From exploration through to final reclamation, they work closely with communities and land owners, and confirm industry compliance with provincial legislation. They also strive to ensure close working relationships with Indigenous peoples.

With more than 25 years' dedicated service, the BCER is committed to ensuring safe and responsible energy resource management for British Columbia.

The oil and gas industry is evolving, and so has the training of its workers.

Working in partnership with Tourmaline Oil, Northern Lights College created the Field Operations Specialist — Hydrocarbon Resources (FOS-HR) program to ensure the field operators of the future would be well prepared to work in the industry.

With a combined 130 years of experience, subject matter experts from both NLC and Tourmaline worked together to create the modules for the program.

The first cohort of the FOS-HR pilot saw eight students in the classroom and the field operations lab at the NLC Fort St. John campus. All of those students went on to work full time for Tourmaline.

“Going out on our practicum helped us see what we were learning in class we could actually use and helped us understand the processes further,” the FOS-HR class wrote in a letter to their instructor, Eleanor Vokes.

“We all know a lot more about being operators now and we’re excited to pursue this career.”

ENERGIZING THE PEACE

The Peace River Region of British Columbia is an energy superpower: coal, oil, gas, hydroelectric, and solar and wind power too.

Solar and wind: these are no longer energies of the future, they are the energies of now, and for good reason. They have quickly become the least expensive energies ever, and the Peace River Region is rich in both.

A remarkable organization, Peace Energy Co-op, based in Dawson Creek, is spearheading renewable energy adoption in the Peace Region. They were the first renewable energy cooperative in western Canada, and the second in Canada overall.

Early in their formation in 2003 they were the lead organization that made British Columbia's first commercial wind facility a reality: Bear Mountain Wind Park. Situated just a short distance from Dawson Creek, this impressive state of the art wind facility (34, 3-megawatt wind turbines) is also a popular recreational area and tourist attraction. A map to guide visitors there is available from the Peace Energy Co-op office and Tourism Dawson Creek.

The sunny Peace Region is also a great place to add solar to your home or business. Peace Energy Co-op has custom designed and installed more than one million watts of solar in the region.

"We don't just sell solar equipment," explains Peace Energy Co-op's solar consultant Greg Dueck, "we custom design a solar power system that fits the needs of your home, farm, ranch or business, then we supply the equipment and install it with our team of experienced solar installers."

With careful design and our rich solar resource, it's easy to eliminate a home or business's electrical bills completely. Peace Energy Co-op is quick to point out that there are generous BC Hydro rebates available for home and business solar, so now is a good time reap the financial and security benefits of having your own solar power system.

Solar makes sense at any scale, to power a home or a whole town or city. The town of Hudson's Hope, just an hour and a half drive west of Dawson Creek, is home to the province's largest municipal solar project. Peace Energy Co-op designed and installed a total of just over 500 kilowatts of solar on nine of their municipal buildings, a project that now saves the District of Hudson's Hope about $70,000 a year in electrical expenses, and will continue to do so for at least 25 years. Quite an accomplishment for a small northern town of just 1,100 residents!

The almost 700 members of Peace Energy Cooperative share a common vision: a future filled with hope and opportunity powered by the limitless, renewable energies of the sun and wind. Working together in the Peace Region they are making this vision a reality, one solar panel at a time.

THE MASSIVE POWER OF WATER

HYDROELECTRIC

Hydroelectric in the Peace Region generates an average of 18,200 Gigawatt hours per year - 40% of BC Hydro's total power generation.

The hydroelectric industry is a significant part of the energy sector in the Peace Region. Our area is home to several hydroelectric projects, including the W.A.C. Bennett Dam, the Peace Canyon Dam, and the Site C Dam. These projects provide clean and renewable energy to British Columbia and support the province's commitment to reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

The W.A.C. Bennett Dam, located on the Peace River, is one of the largest hydroelectric dams in North America, with a generating capacity of 2,730 megawatts.

The dam has been in operation since 1968 and has provided clean and renewable energy to British Columbia for over 57 years. The Peace Canyon Dam, located downstream from the W.A.C. Bennett Dam, has a generating capacity of 695 megawatts and has been in operation since 1980.

The Site C Dam, now complete on the Peace River, is expected to provide clean and renewable energy to British Columbia for over a century. The dam has a generating capacity of 1,100 megawatts with all the main generators are online, will be able produce 5,100 gigawatt-hours (GWh) of electricity annually - enough to power an estimated 500,000 homes per year.

Overall, the hydroelectric industry is an important part of the energy sector in the Peace Region.

Many believe that as the region continues to grow and develop, the hydroelectric industry will play an important role in meeting the energy needs of the province while balancing environmental and community concerns.

HARNESSING THE NORTHERN WINDS

WIND POWER

Four large wind facilities are in full operation across the North Peace region, producing an estimated total of 570+ MW.

The Bear Mountain Wind Park is an electricity generating wind farm facility located near Dawson Creek. It is owned by Bear Mountain Wind LP and began operations in November, 2009. BC's first operating wind farm has a generating capacity of 102 MW.

Meikle Wind near Tumbler Ridge is a 180 MW wind energy generation project with 61 GE wind turbines. The project has the annual energy capacity equal to the needs of approximately 54,000 British Columbian homes.

The Dokie Ridge Wind Farm is a wind farm located near Chetwynd. It was put into commercial operation in 2011. The facility has a generating capacity of 144 MW and is producing 320 to 340 gigawatt-hours of energy per year.

Capital Power's 142 MW Quality Wind facility located near Tumbler Ridge, began commercial operation on November 6, 2012, on time and under budget. The project generates enough clean electricity to meet the average annual needs of about 43,000 homes.

These are all Independent power producer projects, feeding clean wind power into the BC grid under contract with BC Hydro. The future of the wind industry in the Peace is bright, with over 10,000 MW of wind energy potential waiting for development.

Two new Wind Power projects were announced in 2025:

The Stewart Creek Wind Project is a partnership between West Moberly First Nations and Innergex. The project is expected to come online in 2030 and produce an additional 200 MW.

The Taylor Wind Project is a partnership between Saulteau First Nations and EDF Renewables. The project is expected to come online in 2031 and produce an estimated 200 MW.

AGRICULTURE

The Peace Region is classified as a prairie and Canada's most northern agricultural region.

Long before any oil exploration took place, the North Peace was largely populated by farmers. In fact, Fort St. John's downtown was once part of a farm owned by Clark Mackenzie Finch, whose name adorns one of the elementary schools in the city.

The Peace Region lays claim to almost 11.5 million acres of agricultural land - 27% of BC's total Agricultural Reserve. An estimated 1,532 farms and ranches are located throughout our region.

Located on the only prairie in BC, The Peace Region is filled with fertile farmland, which produces most the province's grains, including canola, barley, oats and wheat, and supports a thriving livestock industry. Farms located along river valleys also produce field crops that grow well in shorter seasons, like root vegetables, peas, cabbage and sweet corn. The livestock grown in the region ranges from beef and dairy cattle, to bison, ostriches, chickens, hogs and sheep.

In addition, an increasing number of smaller farmers produce organically certified meat and produce. Much of this product is sold direct to the public through local Farmer's Markets and the Peace Region Farmer's Institute. The Butcher Block, located in Fort St. John and Dawson Creek sells locally produced meat including sought-after Hutterite turkeys from the South Peace Colony.

HEALTH AND WELLNESS IN THE NORTHEAST

Dawson Creek Hospital

Northern Health delivers a full spectrum of health care services across the Northeast, supporting residents in Fort St. John and Hudson's Hope, Dawson Creek, Chetwynd and Tumbler Ridge, and Fort Nelson. This integrated model allows residents of diverse rural and remote communities to access both local services and region-wide specialty care through coordinated pathways.

Acute care services

Acute care services are available through a combination of hospitals and health centres that provide services ranging from emergency treatment, inpatient care, surgical services where available, and diagnostic imaging and laboratory support. These services are tailored to the needs of each community while also connecting residents to the broader system when higher levels of care are required.

Dawson Creek and Fort St. John serve as the region's largest acute care centres, providing emergency care, inpatient units, maternity and surgical services, medical imaging, pharmacy, laboratory, and ambulatory care services. Dawson Creek is also supported by the construction of the new Dawson Creek & District Hospital, which will introduce expanded emergency and inpatient capacity, modernized maternity and surgical spaces, enhanced medical imaging, and improved patient and family-centred environments to better meet the long-term health care needs of the region.

Communities such as Chetwynd, Hudson's Hope, and Tumbler Ridge are home to facilities that provide emergency, urgent and primary care services supported by local diagnostic services (lab and medical imaging), with residents accessing higher level emergency or inpatient care through Dawson Creek or Fort St. John.

Across all communities, urgent and emergency care follows a standardized triage process that ensures patients are assessed and treated according to the severity of their condition. Any required patient transfers are coordinated through provincial transport systems, including BC Emergency Health Services, to ensure safe and timely access to the appropriate level of care.

Supporting Indigenous health and cultural safety

Northern Health is committed to providing culturally safe and respectful care for Indigenous patients and families across the region. The Indigenous Health team collaborates with First Nations and Métis communities to provide supports for patients navigating the health system, and works to integrate Indigenous ways of knowing, values, and cultural practices into health services.

Primary and community care

Primary and community care includes the basic health care services that people access through primary care providers like family doctors, nurse practitioners, and other members of the health care team – including access to community specialists and pharmacists.

Northern Health works with community partners to implement a model of care that is centred on the person and their family. This approach involves creating health care teams to provide a range of health care services. This improves and provides continuity of care over time and across settings, resulting in better long-term health outcomes.

Primary Care Networks (PCNs) are partnerships between community partners who work together to ensure patients have access to a full range of team-based primary care services for all their day-to-day health care needs.

Dawson Creek and Fort St. John offer the widest range of primary care providers, supported by community nursing, public health programming, chronic disease management, social work, dietitian services, and rehabilitation.

Chetwynd, Fort Nelson, Hudson's Hope, and Tumbler Ridge also provide clinic based primary care and community nursing, which includes wound care, health monitoring, chronic disease support, and preventive health services such as immunizations and communicable disease follow-up.

Indigenous Care Teams assist with navigation, communication, advocacy, discharge planning, and ensuring access to cultural and spiritual supports, while Indigenous Patient Experience Advisors work with patients and communities to address concerns and promote culturally respectful care. Northern Health also works in partnership with the First Nations Health Authority, which offers culturally grounded and accessible supports and programs for Indigenous residents across the Northeast.

Home and community care

The Primary and Community Care teams also provide a range of integrated home and community based professional and caregiver services to help people remain independent at home for as long as possible, supporting independence, recovery, and quality of life.

These services also help coordinate and connect people to programs and services as needed, including other health services and community resources. Programs include home support services, adult day programs where available, respite services, palliative services, and access to interprofessional teams (IPT). IPTs deliver community nursing, community nutrition and dietitian services, rehabilitation (occupational and physical therapy) services, social work, and mental health counselling.

Each Northeast community has access to a combination of these services, helping to support smooth transitions between home, hospital, community care, and long-term care when needed.

Long-term Care

Northern Health operates long-term care homes across the region that provide 24 hour professional care and supervision in a protective, supportive environment for people who have complex care needs and can no longer be cared for in their own homes. Care is based on a person and family centred philosophy, supporting physical, emotional, social, and cultural wellbeing.

Fort St. John is home to Peace Villa, which is one of the region's largest long-term care facilities, while Rotary Manor supports the long-term care needs of Dawson Creek and area residents. In Fort Nelson and Chetwynd, long-term care is provided by the multi-level care unit at the hospital. Residents across the Northeast can access assessment for eligibility and placement in Assisted Living or long-term care, through their local Community Health Services program.

Population and public health

Population and Public Health (PPH) teams deliver immunizations, communicable disease prevention and control, health promotion, harm reduction, school-based health programs, maternal and early childhood supports, wellness education, environmental health inspections, healthy living support, and more. Public health teams also play a major role in promoting the health, safety and well-being of those in licensed care facilities like daycares and long-term care, and in emergency preparedness and responding to health events affecting communities.

Environmental health officers safeguard the well-being of both the public and the environment by overseeing food safety, drinking water systems, recreational water facilities, industrial camps, and other regulated environments, promoting safe and healthy community settings across the region.

Virtual Clinic

Several virtual pathways supplement local services across the region, including the Northern Health Virtual Clinic. The Virtual Clinic is focused on providing timely care for patients who do not currently have a primary care provider. It is supported by a compassionate team of health care professionals including doctors, nurse practitioners, nurses, mental health clinicians, a social worker, and a physiotherapist.

The Northern Health Virtual Primary & Community Care Clinic also provides support for mental health and substance use for residents without a regular provider.

Digital Health Tools

Residents of all Northeast communities benefit from digital health tools offered by Northern Health. HealthElife allows patients to access their hospital records, lab results, and imaging reports online; myhealthkey supports communication with primary care providers and provides access to visit summaries and results; NH Check In lets patients join virtual lineups; and NH Tracks gives families real-time updates during a patient's surgical journey. Telehealth services also reduce the need for travel by enabling secure video appointments with health care providers and specialists from across BC. These tools support continuity of care and help patients stay connected to their health information from anywhere in the region.

Northern Health provides health services to 300,000 people over an area of 600,000 square kilometres in the province of British Columbia.

FSJ HOSPITAL FOUNDATION

Founded in 1994 through a generous gift from the late Archie Ferguson, the FSJ Hospital Foundation has spent more than thirty years carefully stewarding community donations and investing them where they matter most. Since day one, our focus has been bringing essential medical equipment to the Fort St. John Hospital and Peace Villa so people in our region can receive the care they need, close to home.

Your gifts help make that possible. Because of donors like you, more patients can access important tests, treatments, and equipment right here in our community without the added cost or stress of travelling for care.

When you choose to give, you create a direct and meaningful impact on the health of your family, your neighbours, and everyone who depends on our hospital. Your generosity strengthens local care today and helps ensure our growing community has the equipment and support it needs for the future.

As a partner in our community, we are dedicated to raising funds to enhance health care in the North Peace.

The Fort St. John & District
Chamber of Commerce acknowledges Treaty 8 territory
- the ancestral and traditional territory of the Cree, Dene, and Métis people. We recognize the land as an act of reconciliation and gratitude to those whose territory we reside on and do business.

Dear Chamber Members and Community,

Like many here in the Peace, I made my pilgrimage to Fort St John thinking that I was just going to be here for a short time! Well, I'm still here, 21 years later, fully immersed with kids in schools and sports, a home and an ever-growing network; I feel my roots in Fort St John growing deeper and deeper as each season passes and each connection is made.

Since landing here, I have spent my career in varying aspects of oil & gas with a particular focus on establishing connections and building relationships. In 2023 I shifted my focus slightly to concentrate more directly on serving people expressly in the community, and joined RE/MAX as a Realtor.

As the world shifts, I am extremely passionate about ensuring the vitality of Fort St John amidst initiatives that balance economic growth with environmental responsibility and the vision for a thriving industry. I believe we can continue to build an environment of collaboration and mutual success as I envision a territory that continues to grow and prosper while maintaining its unique character.

Through dedication to sustainable development, community engagement, and economic vitality, I am immensely optimistic about my year as President of the Board for our Chamber of Commerce and the entire community.

Sincerely,

Deena Del Giusto, President
Fort St. John & District Chamber of Commerce

BEN
MCCORD

Century 21
ben.mccord@century21.ca

Born and raised in Fort St. John, I am deeply passionate about this community and the people who make it thrive. Growing up on a farm just north of town, I learned the value of hard work, perseverance, and community at an early age—lessons that continue to shape both my personal and professional life today. Surrounded by the outdoors and a strong sense of responsibility, I developed a lasting appreciation for entrepreneurship and local business.

I have strong ties throughout Fort St. John and am proud to be actively involved in many sports clubs across the city. Sports have always been a meaningful way for me to connect with people, build relationships, and stay engaged with our community beyond business.

Professionally, I come from a family deeply rooted in real estate, and after spending years working in the oil and gas sector, I made the transition to becoming a REALTOR® in my hometown. Helping individuals, families, and investors navigate the real estate market is more than a career for me—it's a way to contribute to the long-term strength and stability of our region.

I am also the founder of EnergyNexus, a Fort St. John-based entrepreneurs group created to bring local business owners, innovators, and entrepreneurs together. EnergyNexus is a place to network, share ideas, trade knowledge, and grow—because I strongly believe that when we support one another, our entire business community benefits.

As a member of the Board of Directors for the Fort St. John Chamber of Commerce, I am excited to advocate for local businesses, champion entrepreneurship, and help spearhead business growth in the region. I look forward to bringing fresh ideas, practical insight, and a strong community-focused perspective to support the Chamber's mission and help Fort St. John continue to grow and prosper well into the future.

DIRECTOR

ABBOTT

Louisiana Pacific
claire.abbott@lpcorp.com

I was first introduced to Northern BC in early 2020. While work initially brought me here, it was my love for the outdoors and the welcoming people of the North Peace that made me stay. I've been in the environmental industry for about six years, starting with hands-on fieldwork exploring nature at its finest. In August 2024, I transitioned into my current role as Environmental Plant Manager at Louisiana-Pacific in Fort St. John.

What I enjoy most about my job is the opportunity to engage with the community and collaborate with First Nations groups. This is my first year serving on the Chamber, and I'm excited to contribute my experience in environmental compliance, air and water quality, and waste reduction to support local sustainability initiatives. I aim to share an industry perspective that balances economic growth with environmental responsibility. Additionally, I'm passionate about working with the community on education and conservation programs that strengthen connections between businesses and residents.

DARIN

Louisiana Pacific
darin.hancock@lpcorp.com

I've lived in the north of the province for over 25 years after making the trek from sunny southern Ontario. And in 2019 I moved to Fort St John, one of the sunniest places in the province and have enjoyed living in the region since. This area has so much to offer it's a tough list to compile.

Working in the forest industry the entire time I've been in northern BC has allowed me to make excellent, lasting connections throughout not only the forest industry but the resource industry, as well as the First Nations communities. And, as a past small business owner I'm well in tune with the struggles and the importance of small business.

This will be my second year on the Chamber, and I am excited to get started on all that the Chamber and its members, have to offer. Working together is where the health and success of business will be.

This will be my second year on the board here at the Chamber. I have learned a lot about what the Chamber is about in my first year and what some of the challenges are for businesses in the Fort St John region. I feel that we have a strong and focused group on the board that will continue to work together for the greater good of all businesses.

Educating the public on what the board provides and the resources that are available to them to help them grow and stay informed of municipal, provincial and Federal changes that may impact their business. We are in challenging times but the more we educate ourselves and work together, the stronger our region will become.

phil_tashascott@hotmail.com

My name is Natasha Scott, and my family has lived in Northeast BC for generations. I was born and raised in Fort Nelson and love having the northern Rocky Mountains and crystal-clear streams as my playground. I moved to Fort St John four years ago and I have appreciated the warm welcome from the hardworking people of the North Peace region.

The north is full of opportunity, and I have been fortunate to work in forestry, road construction, tourism, education, and various governmental positions. I value all of the connections that I have made. I am a strong advocate for Northeast British Columbia's energy and resource contributions.

This is my first term with the Chamber of Commerce, and I look forward to expanding and learning more about this beautiful region and working together for a stronger business and community connection. I appreciate the impact that the Chamber of Commerce has with local businesses, and I feel very honoured to serve on the Board of Directors.

Shop Local Benefits in the North Peace:
Supporting Our Businesses, Supporting Our Community.

In the heart of the North Peace, supporting local businesses isn't just about shopping—it's about fostering a community that thrives on the services and products we rely on every day. The Shop Local program has been a cornerstone for businesses in our region, and we are excited to build on its momentum, ensuring that the North Peace remains a vibrant place for both consumers and entrepreneurs.

Why Shop Local?

Shopping local has an impact that extends far beyond a transaction.

When you support a local business, you are investing in the future of your community.

Here's how:

Economic Growth:

Money spent at local businesses stays within the community, helping to grow the local economy. These businesses create jobs and provide services that residents rely on.

Personalized Service:

Local businesses often offer more personalized service and are better able to meet the specific needs of the community.

Job Creation:

Whether it's small family-run shops or local branches of national chains, the majority of employees at these businesses are your neighbours—people who live and raise their families right here in the North Peace.

Charitable Contributions:

Local businesses are also dedicated to giving back. Many actively support local causes, sponsor events, and contribute to making our community a better place.

we have to offer

fsjchamber.com

The North Peace region continues to play a vital role in the economy of British Columbia and Canada. Businesses across Fort St. John, Taylor, Hudson's Hope, Charlie Lake, and the surrounding Peace River Regional District are leaders in energy production, construction, agriculture, transportation, and a growing range of service industries.

The Fort St. John and District Chamber of Commerce enters this year focused on strengthening the role of business in shaping the future of our region. Our priorities centre on advocacy, member engagement, and regional leadership. These efforts are designed to ensure the North Peace remains a competitive and attractive place to live, work, and invest.

Advocacy remains one of the Chamber's most important responsibilities. Businesses in our region continue to face challenges related to workforce availability, housing supply, infrastructure investment, and regulatory processes. By working closely with our members, local governments, and partner organizations, the Chamber is helping ensure regional priorities are clearly communicated to provincial and national decision makers.

This year marks continued growth for the Creating Energy Conference, which has become an important forum for conversations about economic development and energy innovation in Northeast British Columbia. The conference brings together industry leaders, government representatives, Indigenous partners, and local businesses to discuss opportunities, challenges, and the future direction of our region's economy.

Supporting local businesses remains at the heart of the Chamber's work. Networking events, training sessions, and member promotion initiatives create opportunities for businesses to connect, collaborate, and grow. From business mixers and educational workshops to member spotlights and community engagement, the Chamber continues to provide platforms that help local businesses increase their visibility and strengthen relationships across the region.

Resources such as Your Guide to the Peace Region are also an important part of building awareness about the services, industries, and opportunities available throughout the North Peace. By strengthening these resources and expanding digital access, the Chamber continues to support both businesses and residents as they navigate the region's economy.

The North Peace has long been defined by resilience, innovation, and strong community leadership. The Chamber is proud to work alongside businesses, community partners, and regional leaders to support continued economic growth and opportunity. Together, we will continue to build a strong and prosperous future for the Peace Region.

FORT ST. JOHN & DISTRICT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WHY MEMBERSHIP MATTERS

Supporting our Business Community

The North Peace is built by the people and businesses that live and work here. From small local shops to major industry leaders, every business plays a role in keeping our region strong. The Fort St. John and District Chamber of Commerce works to support those businesses by creating connections, sharing opportunities, and speaking up for the needs of our local economy. Being part of the Chamber means being part of a community that works together to help businesses succeed.

A Stronger Voice for Local Business

When businesses speak together, their voice is stronger. The Chamber brings forward the concerns and ideas of local businesses to municipal, provincial, and national leaders. Issues such as housing, workforce availability, infrastructure, and investment affect every business in the region. Through the Chamber, businesses have a way to ensure their perspectives are heard and considered when decisions are being made.

Making Valuable Connections

Many business opportunities start with a simple conversation. The Chamber creates spaces where those conversations can happen. Events such as business mixers, lunch and learns, and the Creating Energy Conference allow business owners, managers, and community leaders to meet, share ideas, and build relationships. These connections often lead to partnerships, referrals, and new opportunities.

Increasing Visibility and Trust

Being a Chamber member shows customers and other businesses that you are committed to the community. It demonstrates professionalism and local involvement. Members receive promotion through the Chamber's directory, newsletter, social media, and community events. These opportunities help businesses reach new audiences and strengthen their reputation within the region.

Practical Benefits for Businesses

Chamber membership also provides benefits that support day to day business operations. Members can access programs such as the Chamber Plan employee benefits program, business training sessions, promotional opportunities, and sponsorship options at Chamber events. Members also receive updates and information about economic trends, regional initiatives, and opportunities that may support their growth.

Working Together for the Future

When businesses join the Chamber, they help strengthen the entire region. A strong Chamber supports economic development, encourages investment, and promotes the North Peace as a place where businesses and families can thrive. Together, Chamber members help build a stronger, more connected, and more prosperous Peace Region.

Moving Forward Together

Let's make 2026 the year we continue to elevate the North Peace community.

As consumers, continue to shop locally, whether it's a visit to your favourite cafe, a purchase from the local hardware store, or a service provided by your neighbour's business. For business owners, take advantage of the growing online tools and our support to boost your visibility.

Together, we can make sure that the North Peace stays a vibrant, engaged, and strong community for years to come.
